ABOUT G-ONE

G-one is a wrist strap paired with an Android app. The strap streams movement and skin temperature to the phone over Bluetooth. The app watches the readings with fixed safety rules and three small trained models, explains each alert in plain language with an assistant that runs entirely on the phone without internet, and after a suspected fall gives the wearer a short "I'm OK" window before texting an emergency contact. It also shows official disaster alerts for the district, with local air quality and weather. All health data stays on the phone.

STATEMENT

To whom it may concern,

This is to confirm that the G-one system was demonstrated and tested at Getwell Medicos, Booth No. 13, Sub City Centre, Sector 35-C, Chandigarh 160022. It was tried by our staff and our pharmacist, and by walk-in customers who volunteered to wear the strap and use the app at our counter and shop front. The following were shown and tried:

- Live readings from the wrist strap over Bluetooth
- Trained models for falls, heart rate in context and sleep
- District disaster alerts, local air quality and weather
- Fall alert with the "I'm OK" window before the emergency text
- Plain-language explanations from the offline assistant
- Health report and NFC emergency card

In our observation the system worked as it was demonstrated to us. Our staff and customers found its alerts and explanations easy to understand, and we found it helpful and promising, particularly for elderly customers and for people who live alone. We are happy for the G-one team to refer to this trial at our establishment.

The detailed record of the trial is kept on the G-one Field Trial form, reference G1-FT-CHD-001.
